On 10 May 2012, at Danish Camp Nymindégab, personnel training at the Crystal Eagle 12 exercise had an opportunity to present their work, ways of dealing with tasks and efforts to achieve the final effect to a broader audience. The exercise was at its highest and most busy point so that was a perfect moment to invite the distinguished guests to Camp Nymindégab to familiarize them with the Auriga Force's (AUFOR) activities, which realistically mirror mission environment.

Lieutenant General Rainer Korff, Commander of Multinational Corps Northeast personally accompanied the guests during the whole visit. To fully depict the current situation of the exercising troops, the program of the visit included not only presentations about the Corps itself but also some information about the exercise and the Aurigan scenario. The visitors, led by the Commander and his Deputy Major General Boguslaw Samol, visited several cells and centres responsible for exercise organization and control as well as training audience's command posts located in different parts of the Camp.

Crystal Eagle was a truly multinational exercise with almost 1,200 soldiers from 18 nations. Training crisis situations and resolving conflicts as a multinational force is especially important when realizing that most of real life missions and operations are conducted by coalitions of forces coming from different countries.
